We're standing on the deck of the luxurious Coral Princess as she squeezes into the final locks of the Panama Canal to be lowered 85 feet to sea level in the Caribbean Sea. We came from the Pacific Ocean through locks that raised the ship from the Continental Divide. We passed the jungle-clad hills of the Talamanca and San Blas ranges, the shimmering expanse of Gatun Lake and the Gaillard Cut, a historic nine-mile waterway carved through solid rock. It is an experience we will long remember.
